

DPSP Investment Objectives

Growth

Growth funds have historically provided investors with greater returns than income or growth & income investments. However, growth investments generally offer little current dividend and depend heavily upon earnings growth for their long-term returns. Growth funds typically pay little or no dividend and are considered to contain greater risk than the other fund selections; therefore, investors should be prepared for the large fluctuations in share price associated with these funds.

| Fund Name                      | Investment Objectives   |
|--------------------------------|---|
| SEI Growth 100 Segregated Fund | The fundamental investment objective of the Fund is to achieve long-term growth of capital and income primarily through investment in a diversified portfolio of equity securities. |

Growth & Income

Growth & Income funds attempt to provide growth through rising earnings and dividends, while also providing current income. The prices of these funds will vary more on a day-to-day basis than do those of income funds. Their higher dividend income provides greater price stability than is generally found in growth funds.
